

Title: Positive Impacts on Health Disparities for Kinship Caregivers Using Technologies New to Them: Lessons Learned about Virtual Peer Support Services Compelled by COVID-1

Corresponding Author: Karen Coen Flynn, Senior Research Scientist, University at Albany

"I caution the authors to consider the goal of exploratory qualitative research - deeply understand a phenomenon vs. generalizing (which is more quant), as I do not see this as a limitation of this study. For systematic text condensation, it is important to discuss reflexivity, feasibility in the context of methodological rigor (trustworthiness). I realize there are page limits, but this should be explicitly stated in order to strengthen this project. In the final submission, it would be important to expand on analytic strategy as well (who did the analysis, what is their experience with qual research, relationship with the participants if any). For the results section, it is typical to report the number of main categories and subcategories. This should be revised and included. Interesting study and important contribution with this population of study, but could be strengthened further. "